Yes! Then You'll Not Be Interested in the Prizes—But Play the Game!
Some people marry for money; still more are divorced because of it, and most of us have to work hard all our lives trying to get enough to keep the wolf from hanging around the door ALL the time.
But why WORK for money? Why not PLAY for it—for $390 in cash, or some other part of $1,200, to be given for solving seventy-seven pictures?
Each picture represents the title of a book, and to those coming closest to naming the seventy-seven book titles that the seventy-seven b we want to tell you all about it right now.

First of all, there is no work; no canvassing or soliciting; no getting out and rustling for the prizes. The Times-Dispatch is conducting this game to amuse its readers, and The Times-Dispatch is going to award the prizes just to make the amusement a little joilier.

Turn to the contest rules, and MAKE SURE, before going further, that there is no work connected with the contest.

ANYBODY can play this contest game—subscriber or not. But there is one requirement of course—that each contestant turn in a set of the seventy-seven pictures. One picture appears in the paper each day for seventy-seven days, and, of course, it costs much less to get the paper as a regular subscriber than to buy it day by day on the street.

To-diay picture No. 7 is published so enty-seven days, and, of course, it costs much less to get the paper as a regular subscriber than to buy it day by day on the street.

To-day picture No. 7 is published, so six pictures have appeared. Why not clip No. 7 from to-day's paper and get from The Times-Dispatch the six pictures already published? Then you can continue on, clipping out No. 8 to-morrow, and so on until you have all the seventy-seven pictures. Then send them all in, with your answers.

AND WHY NOT GET THE SIX BACK PICTURES FREE?

Get a contest catalogue, which is a list of 5,000 book titles, seventy-seven correct titles that the seventy-seven contest pictures were drawn to represent. Think of having a list which contains the seventy-seven correct titles! All the 5,000 titles in the catalogue are carefully arranged in alphabetical order so it is easy to look up titles. Look at a picture, think up what sort of book titles that picture MUST have been drawn to represent, and then look among the titles in the catalogue to see whether or not some such title is listed there. There are no tricks in the pictures, no subterfuges, no attempts to deceive.

The catalogue costs 35 cents. By mail, 40 cents.

With each catalogue you receive seven certificates, redeemable free for the first thirty-five pictures. Each certificate is good for five successive pictures. Certificate No. 2 will be redeemable AFTER picture No. 16 has appeared for pictures 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15. And so on Eight Now Dead and Eight Others in Serious Condition.

Cincinnati. August 1 .- Out of the thirty-five persons who suffered burns when the explosion of the gasolene tank of Odin Johnson's motorcycle at Lagoon, Ky., motordrome last night showered spectators with burning oil, eight had died up to 3 o'clock to-night. One other, a woman, cannot recover, the at tending physicians say, while seven others are in a serious condition and not out of danger! Of the others, eighteen suffered more or less painful injuries, but did not require treatment in hospitals.

The explosion occurred after Johnson had collided with an electric light pole, and the racer himself was among the first victims. Statements from several of the eyewitnesses indicated that Johnson's daring attempt to pass another rider was the primary cause of the accident.

He is said to have come in contact with the machine phioted by Gabanna, of the Cleveland team, while trying to pass the latter on the upper elevation of the track.

The impact was slight, but enough to head his machine toward the upper railing. He appeared at this time to have plenty of room, but the machine seemed to refuse to right itself, and crashed into a pole that was some distance beyond the danger mark on the track. tending physicians say, while seven others

The duchess is a wonderful old wo-man of the masterful type, and to a great extent dominates the Parisian fashionable world. For her husband, when he was alive, was the premier duke of France, and she is exceedingly rich, as the helress and descendant of old widow Clicquot, and chief owner of the great champagne business founded by the latter.

The world-famed widow was daughter of a Baron Pensardin, who had acquired a fortune as a cloth manufacturer. In the midst of the revolutionary turmoll, she married a banker of the name of Clicquot at Rheims, her native city, who was an amateur wine grower. She was left a widow at twenty-eight, and being an extremely clever and energetic woman, developed the banking business, and converted her husband's vineyards into a regular wine-growing concern. This prospered to such an extent that it eventually swallowed up and absorbed the bank.

The D'Uzes, although their dukedom ranks as the first in France—the present duke being the premier peer—is by no means the oldest. In fact, the precedence of the Dukes of Uzes dates only from the time of Louis XIII. That monarch, being tired of the eternal squabbles for precedence at the court of Versailles, which he was always being called upon to decide, and entertaining, moreover, doubts as to the validity of some of the titles borne at his court, decreed that persons possessing nobiliary disnities should register them at the office of the keeper of his great seal at Versailles, after proving their right thereto by documentary evidence. Louis XIII, also commanded that the dukes should enjoy their precedence in accordance with the order of their registration, and that the one who repas ever afterwards, over the peers

In olden times the office of Lord Justice General, or the Lord Justiciar was held by the sovereign himself and the King even went on circult, just as in the present day the King of Montenegro sits at the gate of his palace in Cettinje and administers justice to his subjects. Thus David II. is on record as having gone on cir-cuit throughout his kingdom, in order to dispense justice as the supreme judge of the land. By degrees, the sovereign delegated his duty to an other, who was styled the Lord Jus-tice Clerk. But it was finally held that the responsibility of representing the sovereign in justice was too great for a mere lawyer, and, accordingly the old-time royal office of Lord Justice General was bestowed upon the greatest nobles in the land. It continued to be conferred by the King upon different nobles until 1830, when it was united by act of Parlia-ment with the office of president of the Court of Sessions, and its bestowal restricted to members of the legal restricted to members of the legal profession. The last nonlegal Lord Justice General was the Duke of Montrose, and it had previously been held by the Dukes of Argyll, one of whom is on record as having presided on circuit at the trial of the famous Appin murder case. It was one which excited much criticism, owing to the fact that the duke had taken advantage of his position to pack the jury box with members of his clan, namely, the Campbells, who, of course, gave blind obedience to his charge and di-
